Welcome Spring.

BY G. B. J.

Spring is coming! Spring is coming!
For I hear the cherry voices
Of the rosy breasted rubin
Bidding every heart rejoice;
And the earth and air and sky
With each other seem to vie,
Singing "Praise to God on high,"
Just for choice.

And the glorious anemone flooding,
Scatters all the d'ring bloom,
Set the shrubs and trees a building,
Telling us of coming bloom.

O, what joy the life to mark,
That doth rise a gleaming spark,
For the slumber and the dark
Seems a tomb.

BY HESKIE ALLEN.

Who has not raised some idle day
And worshipped it through days or years,
And had it shaken, crumb and fall?
Like broken glass, about his feet?

It may have been some sculptor hand,
Some painter, or the painter's art;
But when our eyes discerned a flaw
We tore the image from the heart.

Perhaps some poet and his songs
As idly worshipped from afar
And dreamed him perfect and divine
And viewed as peerless guiding star.

In wild, sweet strain or single line
Some random thought he had expressed,
That struck in us responsive chords
And awakened echoes in our breast.

And then we thought what harmony
Would be 'twixt that mind and our own,
When suddenly, the dream's dispelled,
We find our idol overthrown.

For some rash act or word (although Repented of and sorrowed o'er),
Has made us deem the worshipped one
But common clay and nothing more!

We bow at some fair singer's throne,
Rapt and proud by sweet melody,
When by a harsh, discordant note
The potent charm dispelled may be.

We raised our idols up too high
And o'er the mind deep sadness stole
When first we found in them a trait
Unworthy of a noble soul.

Oh broken idols! Everywhere
We see ye, - others' and our own,
And find companioned idleness
Belongs to pagan not alone.

Selected Tale.

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT.

I.

There are many lovely towns lying along the Connecticut River, but none more lovely than that near which one of the Regicides concealed himself for a long time, to escape pursuit. This old town has a double row of elm and maple trees on either side of its principal street, which extends two miles in length along the river. About half a mile from the southern end of the street stands the old Walbridge place. This has stood for nearly two hundred years, and so many old memories are clustered about it that relatives near and remote would consider it a great misfortune if the estate were allowed to pass out of the family.

In the south parlor of the old house, on a bleak evening in January, 1860, an old man lay dying. He was the owner of the Walbridge homestead, and the last of the old stock. He had one son who was now standing by his bedside, and a deeply beloved daughter who for fifteen years had cared for him, and now sat chafing his cold hands, while her two children knelt at the foot of the bed, shading their eyes, dreading to know what this death-bed might reveal to them. John Walbridge, the old man's son, a wealthy distiller in a distant town, could scarcely restrain his selfish impatience that he had been defined here since yesterday, and his father was still alive. The old man stirred, his eyes slowly opened.

"Mary, I want to see Mary."

"Here I am, father."

"Alone, alone."

Reluctantly the brother left the room, and the children were about to follow when the old man raised his head feebly—

"Robert—"

The mother, believing, Robert to be wanted, detained him, carefully closing the door. With difficulty the dying man spoke. His words were disconnected, but he made them understood that he wanted to speak of his will, and he twice or thrice repeated, "The last—the last." They imagined that there was more than one will and that he had been unable or unwilling to choose between them.

"Afraid of John, gasped the old man. 'Look out!' Again he muttered incoherently, 'I put it in the—'"

Thinking to help his feebleness, Mary asked: "Did you leave your last will in your study?"

A decided negative movement of the head and a glance of his eyes answered her. "In the—He stopped. Mary turned her head and saw her brother John standing in the door. The dying man had seen him first and the slight arrested the words that trembled on his lips. The effort at conversation had exhausted the sick man, and, although he several times opened his eyes and once or twice pressed Mary's hand feebly, he spoke no more, and at midnight he died.

Robert, a lad of sixteen, was abashed enough not to mention the conversation which had evidently not been overheard by his uncle John, and who, as only the last disjointed sentence reached his ears, had failed in his object of eavesdropping.

During the interval between the old man's death and burial, John Walbridge as the only son and sole heir of his father's large estate, remained master of the house. He had just now a special reason for discovering any will made of late by his father, for in a recent visit he had with some difficulty convinced his father of the incapacity of any woman to manage business; and having given his promise that he would provide for his sister Mary and her children liberally, he had the satisfaction of seeing his father sign a will bequeathing to him the bulk of the family property, leaving only a small balance in bequests to various relatives, and to the church of which he was a member and liberal supporter. Much to John's anxiety, however, he had not seen the will, and, for his father was unwilling to make Mary a witness of her own misfortune and the one domestic war was away for the night. John, however, excited from his father the promise that the will should be witnessed in the morning, nothing having been changed meanwhile. He had such confidence in his father's word that he had left early in the morning without having ascertained anything save that his father was as well as usual.

II.

To the funeral of Deacon John Walbridge gathered all the old settlers for miles around. He had been well known and beloved, and many were the wishes expressed for Mary's fortune, and many expressed the hope that John would not inherit any of the old father's honestly-earned wealth to add to his own gains. Robert, finding that his uncle John had discovered his father's will in the study, and remembering that his grandfather had stoutly denied that it was in that room, spent much time in hunting other places of concealment with which the old house was well supplied. His efforts met with no success. Mary, too, sought in many places, but finally gave up the search in vain.

After the funeral, according to custom, the will was read, and John Walbridge was found to be the sole heir. The lawyer who read the document continued to curiously examine it after he had ceased reading, and finally called John's attention to some words fairly traced below the signature. These they finally made out to read:

"My care upon him if he does not care for Mary and her children."

For a time these words recurred frequently to John's mind, and made him uncomfortable; but he soon dismissed the thought of fear, and calmly bade Mary remember that she with her two children had had a good home here for fifteen years, when she had been left a widow and penniless. These children had thus far been kept in school and well clothed, and, as Robert was now of an age to earn his own living, he would advise his sister to place the boy without delay in some clerkship. He had, himself, some influence in his own town, and he would cheerfully use it in Robert's behalf. As for the girl, as she was yet too young to help herself, he would undertake to clothe her and keep her in the same school where she now was, until she was sixteen years old. He intended to sell the old house as soon as an opportunity offered, but until such time as he could find a buyer Mary might remain there with her child as she had done. Mary was so indignant at her brother's treatment of her that she would have rejected the proposal with the scorn it merited had not Robert begged her to submit. He was still positive that another will was somewhere concealed, and to leave the house was to lose the chance of finding its hiding place. Thus it happened that the uncle returned to his business, leaving his sister and her children in charge of the old house.

III.

Robert's one idea, now, was to find the will that he was sure must be concealed somewhere in the house. With patience almost inexhaustible, he turned out the contents of every old bureau, ransacked the frames for any little drawer that might be concealed from casual observation, he examined every cupboard, the boards in the floor, the old clock, the old bedsteads with a curious drawer under the head—a place which ancestors thought to be a safe hiding place for valuables while the owners slept. Robert dreamed out strange holes and corners which in his feverish waking he could not find. Often did Mary advise her son to give up the idea which absorbed him, and try to find employment suited to his age and attainments. Not to be bolden to his uncle, Robert sought and obtained a situation as clerk in the small store to which the postoffice was attached. He thus learned the method of two kinds of business at once, and proved himself so competent that there was soon no danger of his being supplanted by any one else so long as he chose to retain the position.

Nothing more was said about the sale of the old place, but a man came once to look at the premises, and Robert soon after heard a rumor of a mortgage upon the property. John Walbridge had not always been such a hard-hearted brother as he now proved himself to Mary in her emergency. He had of late been conducting his business as a large scale and had speculated largely in tobacco; had lost large sums upon the crops left un-sold upon his hands, and business at the distillery was thus crippled. He hoped the next season would be better. If he could only dispose of the large stock of tobacco he had stored in his barn he would be all right once more. While he was in tortoise, between hope on the one hand and fear of failure on the other, his immense barn, a situated near each other, and filled with choice tobacco, caught fire from some cause unknown, on a blustering night. The dry and papery stock burned like tinder. Nothing was saved, but he said to himself, "After all, the insurance will help me out of my difficulties." But on arriving at the office of the agent he received the overwhelming news that "the policy expired yesterday."

Ruin stared him in the face. His creditors, on learning the state of the case, and remembering the insurance, as he had done, presented their claims. Many of them had waited for months, as a creditor often travels a man reputed to be wealthy. A heavy mortgage had been put upon the distillery property to raise money to pay those creditors who were the most clamorous. The old homestead, also, was mortgaged heavily, to meet the demand of other creditors. These were the largest, but not by any means all his debts, and, worst of all, the poor man had not a spark of conscience left, otherwise he must have been harassed day and night because of his broken promise to his father.

IV.

Nearly two years passed while all these changes were transpiring. Robert had become a skillful clerk. He had been steadily in school, and in June would graduate from the high school in her own town. She would soon be competent to take care of herself. In John Walbridge's life, meanwhile, one misfortune seemed to pave the way for another. The loss of his property was followed by the death of his wife. He had but one child, a daughter, whom he dearly loved. For her he had intended to amass a fortune.

Thus matters stood in May, 1862, when two men from the city presented themselves at the office of John Walbridge, and, reminding him that the mortgage in their hands were legally due, demanded payment of the same. John was unable to pay, but he had fully expected to be able to come to some terms with them and thus put off the evil day. He was doomed to disappointment. "Pay now or we attach all," he was forced to yield to the situation, having no money wherewith to pay.

That night the poor man felt a victim to some shock that deprived him of his mental faculties. He never knew his daughter again. He was never able to wait upon himself more. He was a helpless burden on his faithful daughter's hands.

V.

Out of the dear old house Mary and her two children were driven. The furniture, however, they were allowed to retain, and with it they fitted up a small house which Robert's means enabled him to hire. As the uncle and cousin were destitute, they were welcomed into the household, and the two little families were dependent on the exertions of Robert. However, when the new school year opened Bessie received an appointment as teacher, and thus was enabled to assist her brother.

Among the furniture of the homestead was a very old piano, with little square legs, in size like old fashioned table legs, and fitted with the round brass ornaments we sometimes see on bedsteads and bureaus in our grand-mother's rooms. After John Walbridge and his daughter became part of the little household, Mary sorely missed her piano, but the cousins laughingly assured her they could well supply the deficiency. They all hastened to the lumber room, and endeavored to open the old spinet, but it was locked—baited up, in fact.

Robert, in his enthusiasm, broke open the old instrument; but to his disappointment not one string was left. The case was full of papers and bundles of documents.

An idea occurred to Robert—the missing will!

"Keep back. Don't touch a thing for your liver, until I look!" he cried. He quickly removed roll after roll of dusty papers, and at last his eye caught sight of one envelope fresher and less dusty than the rest.

"Last Will and Testament of John Walbridge"—the date but a few days preceding the old man's death; later than the one by which John Walbridge, Jr., had come into possession of his father's property. Robert's breath came quick and fast.

"See! see! mother, look! I cannot read," and he fainted quite away. There it was—the missing will; and as John Walbridge could not mortgage what was not his—by this, the latest will, all the old homestead belonged to Mary and her children.

Imagine the rejoicing. They sought it as much as possible for cousin Mary's sake, and when, after her father's death, she became Robert's wife, she had the full share of all the pleasures that the old homestead afforded.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

A Hunt in a Horse-Car.

A Columbia avenue car turned into Franklin street on Saturday morning and began to crawl slowly down town. Pretty soon the car stopped, the conductor rushed out and landed an immense basket on the platform, and an old woman in a black and white shawl followed it. The passengers eyed the big basket suspiciously as it came into the door, and there was a general movement of toes and knees to give it room as it passed up the aisle. There was a general sigh of relief when it settled safely upon the floor against the front door, and the toes and knees crept back again into their comfortable positions.

Presently the old woman in the black and white shawl pulled out her wallet to get her fare. Then she began to hunt in the straw which littered the car. The attention of a man who sat next to her was attracted; away, and after the hunt had been carried on for a moment or two his curiosity got the better of him.

"Did you lose something?"

"Yes, I dropped some money down here."

"Can't you find it?"

"No, I can't find it. It's down here somewhere."

"Let me look," and the man began poking over the straw with his cane. Then a man just across the aisle laid down his paper and watched the proceedings with evident interest.

"Lose something?" he asked.

"Lose something money."

"Can't she find it?"

"No, she can't find it."

"Might as well hunt for a needle in a hay-mow."

"Yes; can't find nothing in this straw."

Then a German half way down the car waked up and wanted to know what was the matter.

"Lose a ring or something," said the man next to him, who had caught a little of the conversation.

"Vae dot so? Vae! vae! and she don't find it at all, ain't it?"

"No, she can't find it."

Then a man reading a book near the back platform began to look around, and a colored man, with his mouth wide open and his eyes fastened on the spot, said the woman had dropped a diamond in the straw.

By this time everybody in the car was interested and watched the woman and man with the cane as they turned over the straw. The conductor came in and said he wanted his fare.

"I dropped some money down there," said the woman, and the conductor went down on his knees and buried the money deeper than ever in the straw.

"It's money; it ain't a ring," said the man next to the German.

"Yaw, it was money," said the German to the colored man.

"Dat am money; dat ain't no diamond," said the colored man to the man with the book.

The conductor grew tired of hunting in the straw and said he would like his six cents and went away. The old woman remarked that them conductors was sharks. They just put down the straw to catch money, and she knew a conductor what made lots of money by raking over the hay when he got out to the depot. Then the hunt was resumed until Spring Garden street was reached, when the woman said she would have to go.

"Did you find your money?" asked the man with the paper.

"No, I didn't find it," said the woman.

"Didn't she find it?" asked the man with the book, as she passed out on to the platform.

"No, she didn't find it," said the colored man.

"Find it?" asked the conductor, as he handed out the big basket.

"No," said the woman; "you can have it."

"How much was it?"

"A penny," and the passengers in the car who had been listening for the reply settled back into their seats and tried to put on an innocent look, just as if they hadn't taken the slightest interest in the thing, anyway.—Philadelphia Times.

"Call Again."

President Arthur is never in a happier vein than when relating some anecdote in which there is a subtle vein of humor. He loves a good story, provided it is well told, and when surrounded by his friends he can take a turn at story-telling with the best at the Capital City. The most amusing incident of his northern trip last summer was his reception in Marlborough. He was inclined at first to decline the honor which the citizens of that ancient and historic town put upon him, when Captain Ben. Pitman gravely announced that he had been instructed by the citizens to capture the President of the United States, and gravely took his seat beside the driver, and took charge of the carriage, the President was intensely amused and good-naturedly submitted. The incident which pleased him the most, however, was when the Dispatch was about to weigh anchor to go to Portsmouth. In the midst of a swarm of small boats which were circling about the vessel, there was one dory containing two urchins, one of whom, on catching a glimpse of the President, stood up and yelled at the top of his voice, "Good-bye, Mr. President. Call again when you come this way."

A Premature Decision.

The Superior Court was in session in one of the lower counties of the circuit, and the solicitor, with the counsel for the defence, were engaged in the selection of a jury for the trial of a man charged with murder. A usual in such cases some difficulty was experienced, and the Court was getting tired of the tedious proceedings.

"(All the next juror, Mr. Clerk," said the solicitor for the hundredth time.

The Clerk called, and an old man, with an honest face and a suit of blue-jean clothes, rose in his place, and the solicitor asked the following questions:

"Have you, from having seen the crime committed, or having heard any of the evidence delivered under oath, formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner at the bar?"

"No, sir."

"Is there any bias or prejudice resting on your mind for or against the prisoner at the bar?"

"None, sir."

"Is your mind perfectly impartial between the State and the accused?"

"It is."

"Are you opposed to capital punishment?"

"I'm not."

All the questions had been answered, and the Court was congratulating itself on having another juror, and the solicitor, in solemn tones, said:

"Juror, look upon the prisoner; prisoner, look upon the juror."

The old man adjusted his spectacles, and peeringly gazed at the prisoner for full half a minute, when he turned his eyes toward the Court and enquired:

"Judge, I've condemned if I don't believe he's guilt."

It is useless to add that the Court was considerably exasperated at having lost a juror, but the more humorously inclined had a good laugh out of the old man's premature candor.—Elberton, (Ga.) South.

A Famous War Horse.

In 1862 John H. Whalen, a Kentucky boy of 14 years, who had been in the Confederate service for a year, got possession of a yearling mare, which he christened "Maggie Lucas."

He joined Morgan's riders and rode Maggie through all his campaigns in the South and his raids through Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, and was beside him when he fell at Greenville, Tenn. At the close of the war Mr. Whalen surrendered at Mt. Sterling, but in order to save Maggie he left her in the country and walked into town and gave up his arms. This was afterward found out, and he was arrested and Maggie confiscated. Finally he lost sight of her, and mourned her as a dear departed friend.

Two years ago he found her in Portland, a suburb of Louisville, and gave the negro who owned her $20 and a side saddle for her. She recognized him as soon as he spoke and followed him like a dog. Having no place to keep her, he sent her to a farm five miles out from Louisville, and paid $50 a year for her boarding, although it is sometimes a hard rub to raise the money. She is now 34 years of age, and if she lives until next June, she will be taken to the Morgan reunion at Lexington, and when she dies her skeleton will be preserved and her hide stuffed. Her funeral will be a memorable event, as nearly all the survivors of the Morgan band have pledged themselves to attend.

She Thought She was a good Christian.

A hater of tobacco asked an old negro woman, the friend of whose pipe were annoying him, if she thought she was a Christian. "Yes, brudder, I spects I is." "Do you believe in the Bible?" "Yes, brudder." "Do you know that there is a passage in the Scripture which says that nothing unclean shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, because there is nothing so unclean as the breath of a smoker. What do you say to that?" "Why, I spects to leave my breff behind when I go dar."

Ringworm Humor and Salt-Rheum.

RAYMOND, MASS., Aug. 12, 1878.

MR. H. HOOD & CO., Gentlemen:—I have been afflicted with Ringworm and Salt-Rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had many a sleepless night in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying that they had cured themselves of these troubles by the use of your Sarsaparilla and Ointment. I felt forced to try it, and I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete. I am gratefully yours,

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSES. C. T. HOOD & CO., Gentlemen:—I have been afflicted with Biliousness and Sick Headache for many years. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with all these troubles and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from these severe headaches. She has not taken any of any other medicine since, and what little she had is left to do some other's good, and we must have it in the house. Yours truly,

MR. R. W. THURP, of Milton, Penn., writes,

Nov. 18, 1882:—

"Enclosed please find postal order for five dollars and twenty-five cents, for half a dozen bottles of Hunt's Remedy. I keep a grocery store, and can sell more of your medicine than any drug-store, as I recommend it to all afflicted with kidney disease or dropsy. I tell them that, if they have life enough to swallow it, it will raise them from the dead for a fact; for it did raise me from that slumbering sleep, and, although this was over three years ago, I have had no kidney trouble since. Like the woman in Scripture, I had recourse to many physicians, and grew nothing better, but ever worse. But, thanks to Hunt's Remedy, I am raised as one from the dead."

The Most Skeptical Convinced.

THOUSANDS feel a thrill of joy whenever they gaze upon the magical words, "Hunt's Remedy," for it is the best kidney and liver medicine ever known, and it results to memory the blessings it has proved to them. It is a positive remedy for all diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and urinary organs. The proprietors' names should be written in letters of gold, for few men have done so much for their suffering fellow-beings. One trial will convince the most skeptical, causing them to proclaim to all their friends the many virtues of this great medicine. The demand increases as it becomes known, and where it is best known the sales are the largest. As Mrs. Browning says, "Great is he who uses his greatness for all." This is what the proprietors of Hunt's Remedy do. Their great medicine is for all.—CON.

The Newport Mercury.

JOHN P. JARVIS, Editor and Proprietor
SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1883.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the United States, will meet in Providence in September next; a great meeting is expected.

Samuel J. Randall is down in Maryland lobbying for the speakership. They say that he has the inside track with the Marylanders. Probably Randall is the best man for that position, that there is in his party.

The New Bedford Mercury says: "Prof." Sprague, who has quite worn out his welcome, left the city for New Bedford Friday afternoon. New Bedford might just as well have kept him here as no particular use for him here.

The Massachusetts papers are kept constantly in a ferment over the antics of Governor Butler. They, like the audience in a circus, are continually on the lookout for some new caper from the clown. He will probably give them all the amusement they will want before he steps down and out.

The Ohio legislature has passed a bill which levies a tax of $300 on spiritualistic mediums. It is a doubtful piece of legislation, for although many of the mediums are undoubtedly humbugs, their manifestations stand for religious rites in the minds of not a few.

The Boston Advertiser says that Senators Anthony and Sherman are the only two men now in active political life who participated in the session of Congress in 1861, called together by President Lincoln after the storming of Fort Sumter. All the others are either dead or retired from national politics.

Miss Alice Mitchell Harris youngest daughter of ex-Congressman B. W. Harris, of East Bridgewater, Mass., was married Tuesday, to Congressman John D. White, of Kentucky, the only Republican Congressman from that benighted State. Congressman White comes of a distinguished family. His father was once a speaker of the National House of Representatives.

The Boston Herald says: A man was recently let off with a $1 fine by a Rhode Island court because he had been in jail a month waiting trial. Suppose he had proved to be innocent of the assault with which he was charged? The right to a speedy trial, which the constitution of the United States says a man accused of crime shall enjoy, is a right often violated, and without redress.

To say Butler to a Massachusetts politician is like shaking a red rag before an angry bull. The average Bay Stateite is very mad and growing madder daily. If he is a profane man he is swearing big oaths at his Excellency, and the Republicans who voted for him, "just to see what the old man would do" like the boy who played with the mule's heels, has found out; but one case is about as satisfactory as the other. That said Republican is mentally tearing his hair and swearing that he will get even with the old man this fall.

Characteristics of President Arthur.

A Washington letter writer says: The President is pretty apt to know when any of the families dependent upon his household are in trouble. It is characteristic of him that he expresses the sympathy he always feels in some tangible way. Last winter, according to the story that came to me the other day, the wife of one of the colored men at the White House was grievously ill. The President heard of it and saw that she had all the comforts she required. He went farther. He saw that she had some flowers every day as soon as he learned that she had the southern passion for flowers. For some reason he did not give the gardener a formal order to see that she had one of these formal and exceedingly stiff White House bouquets every day. He contented himself by sending her a few choice flowers from his own desk every afternoon. One day when he was pressed for time by more Congressmen than usual he forgot all about the flowers. Evening came and with it a state dinner party. As he sat at the head of the table in the middle of the dinner the President remembered the sick woman and his own forgetfulness. Quietly gathering out of a mass of sweet flowers before him on the table some of the finest he called a servant, instructed him, and the poor woman soon had the flowers she was longing for.

The New Governor of Georgia.

The Atlanta Republican says McDaniel was a red-hot conventionalist, and a member of the convention that, against the will of the people, took the State of Georgia out of the Union. He is not a representative of the new South, of broad views, disposed to forget the past and work for the future. He is rather of the class of which Bob Toombs has been for years the shining figure, in all things entirely Southern. One need look for no genuine reform, no change of hostile public sentiment, no new departure during his administration. He is a man of integrity, of good abilities, a clear-headed, a man of good presence, and in many respects the superior of any Democratic predecessor, except perhaps.

The Western Cyclone.

DESTRUCTION OF TOWNS AND GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.—TWENTY-THREE PERSONS KILLED IN ONE TOWN, AND THIRTEEN IN ANOTHER.—OVER 150 WOUNDED.

A terrible cyclone visited the villages of Weston and Beauregard, Wis., Sunday afternoon, sweeping everything before it. The weight of the storm passed through the western part of Weston, a section occupied largely by operatives of the Mississippi Mills, and scenes in that quarter, after the fury of the storm had passed, were heartrending. Dwellings were torn to pieces, and their timbers together with trees that had been pulled up by the roots, were strewn about in all directions. Thirteen persons were killed outright, and about sixty were wounded, many of whom have since died. Twenty-seven buildings were destroyed, fences were blown away, and a pine forest just beyond the limits of the town was completely uprooted.

Beauregard, which is only about a mile above Weston, being directly in the path of the storm, was entirely swept away. Twenty-three persons were killed, and ninety were wounded, many fatally. The scene here as the dead and wounded were being gathered from the ruins was appalling. Physicians and other help were sent from surrounding towns in the evening by special trains, and everything was done that could be to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded. The dead were buried Tuesday. The town of Tillman, on the Natchez and Columbia railroad was also destroyed and many killed and wounded, and reports from other towns telling of great suffering show that the storm was spread and very destructive.

The Irish Congress.

The Congress for organizing the new Irish National League is now in session in Philadelphia. There is a large representation present from all parts of the United States. The meetings thus far have been very harmonious and of an interesting character. The report of the Land League was read. It shows that during the year '82 nine branches reported to the central office and were enrolled on the national roll. There are now on the roll 550 branches of whose existence the central office has official knowledge and 298 which are not known officially. Of the 550 branches New York has 138, Massachusetts 140, Connecticut 49, Pennsylvania 44, Iowa 23, New Jersey 19, Ohio 14, Missouri, Michigan and Rhode Island 13 each; Illinois 11 and New Hampshire 10. Of the 298 branches New York has 30, Massachusetts 60, Pennsylvania 29, Connecticut 25, Illinois and Iowa 17 each, Kentucky and Ohio 14 each, Rhode Island 13, and New Jersey 10. The total amount of money received by the secretary, from April 13, 1882, to 25, 1883, was $79,038. Of this amount New York contributed $10,893, Massachusetts $15,721; Pennsylvania, $6394; Connecticut, $633; Illinois, $1293; New Jersey, $1016; Iowa, $1364, and Rhode Island, $1499. The donations, &c., amounted to $4182 and the dollar subscriptions to $6004. The expenses of the year amounted $7466 and the amount remitted to Ireland was $66,657. The balance on hand at this date is $4015.

It is claimed that the town of Salem, N. H., coined the word "dude" twenty years ago. It is common there to speak of a dapper young man as a "dude of a fellow," of a small animal as a "little dude," of a sweetheart as "my dude," and of an aesthetic youth of the Wilde type as a "dude." But how the word attained so sudden and widespread a notoriety puzzles Salem. Its revival at New York is credited to a disgusted Englishman, who remarked, after visiting a rich club, that the young men were all "dudes." The feminine of the dude has recently been created, and "dudelette" is applied to young ladies with bow-wow pets, who have visiting cards printed for the brutes to leave on making calls.

Senator Sherman recently denied the published report that he was about to retire from public life. It has been stated that he contemplated resigning his seat and entering Wall street. Incidentally speaking of the political future of the Republican party, Senator Sherman said that the Democrats had a tidal wave in 1877 and that they had another last year. In 1877 they carried both Pennsylvania and Ohio, but at the following election the Republicans redeemed both States. He had no fear that the Republicans would allow the Democracy to sweep the country and tear up things generally in 1884.

Gov. Foster of Ohio is rich enough to spend $10,000 a year in addition to his salary in "keeping up the dignity of his office," but he does harm in one way—he makes it more difficult than ever for poor men to serve the public in such positions, or, if not poor men, yet those who can't afford to buy $10,000 worth of dignity a year. The Governor means well, but the effect is not wholly desirable.

News has been received from the Northwest coast of the drowning of Messrs. Chapman and Penny, two missionaries attached to the Presbyterian mission, by the upsetting of a boat while out sailing. The bodies have not been recovered.

Current Notes.

While a doctor was visiting a sick woman in Rowlandsville, Penn., two children poured a pint of molasses into his silk hat, which he didn't notice until he put the tile on his head. Language cannot describe his feelings, but it is said that he will petition the next Legislature to pass a bill making it a criminal offense for a child to be born under 12 years of age.

Postmaster General Gresham has directed that in making post-office appointments in Mississippi, no more weight shall be given to ex-Congressman Chamber's recommendations than to those of any private citizen. He has also declined to credit any residents of Virginia to Iowa's quota of appointments.

It is not only newspaper men who write the rejected American comedies and operas. Judge Frederick Gedney of New York has written an opera libretto; Judge Barrett and wife made a play some time ago, which Wallace's considered and postponed.

A young lawyer appeared before a Washington Judge with his umbrella under his arm and his hat on, and in his agitation he forgot to lay either aside when he began speaking. "Hush! you better raise your umbrella!" the Court kindly suggested.

A few nights ago the two daughters of Dr. Baird of Hot Springs, Ark., upon retelling took the usual look under the bed for a burglar, and to their astonishment found him. They screamed and ran out of the room, and the fellow escaped unrecognized.

A Chinese pedler in Portland, Oregon, refused to accept an English shilling, saying: "No good. Me heep sabe—no chicken on him!" The Oregonian is of the opinion that when a heathen Chinese calls our glorious bird of freedom a chicken it is time, indeed, for him to go.

Matt Carpenter's son, who is said to have inherited his father's genius, was asked, when a little boy, what he would be when he grew up, and replied: "Oh! I would like to be a coachman; but I suppose I've got to be a senator."

A railroad is being built to ascend Green Mountain at Mt. Desert. It will be 6000 feet long. The Manchester Locomotive Works are building the engine. The middle cog-rail is being made by the A. Smith Works at East Boston, and is to be finished June 1. About 1200 feet have already been shipped.

Every effort to extinguish the fire which has been burning in the Bear Valley mine, Shamokin, Pa., for the past three months having failed, the mine is now being flooded. It will require six months time to extinguish the fire in this way and put the mine into operation again.

Washington Masonic Belles.

Washington's favorite oak at Mount Vernon, which fell during a storm last year, is being worked up into rails, in the form of gables, etc., by members of the Masonic fraternity, for distribution among the craft throughout the country. The tree was known to have been over 200 years old.

The farmers on the island have nearly finished their planting of potatoes and some corn has been put in, though the ground is as yet hardly warm enough for the successful planting of corn. It is estimated that nearly double the acreage of potatoes has been planted this year over any previous season for a number of years.

The steamer City of Newport is now on the line between Newport and Providence. She has been thoroughly fitted up and painted. The Bay Queen will now receive her spring overhauling preparatory to summer work.

The Fertilizer Question.

BRADLEY FERTILIZER COMPANY, Office and Salesroom, 27 Kilby-st., Boston, April 25, 1883.
Mr. J. A. RANNEY, Dear Sir:—We have noticed your advertisement offering to sell Russell Co's Phosphate containing 16 per cent. more potash than Bradley's. You probably know that potash is the cheapest plant-food constituent that a manufacturer can put into his fertilizer, hence you should sell an article containing 16 per cent. more potash than our goods at a very much less price than we sell ours. Be this as it may, we will sell through our agent, Mr. George A. Weaver, a fertilizer containing as much potash as Russell Co's, for five dollars per ton less than we sell our regular goods, or we will sell a phosphate containing 10 per cent. of potash, regardless of other materials, at a price more than we claim for Russell Co's at $3 dollars per ton to the farmers of New England. When you discontinue using our name in connection with your advertisement you can sell your goods at whatever price you please and we shall not interfere with you, but as long as you use our name to help sell your goods without letting the community what they are, except that they contain a large per cent. of a cheap material, we propose to meet you in your own way. Our goods are for sale in Newport by George A. Weaver, and in Middletown by L. H. Peabody. Yours very truly,
BRADLEY FERTILIZER COMPANY.

The Government Chemist Analyzes two of the Leading Baking Powders, and what he finds them made of.

I have examined samples of "Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder" and "Royal Baking Powder," purchased by myself in this city, and I find they contain:
"Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder."
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Carbonate of Ammonia
Tartaric Acid

Available carbonic acid gas 12.62 per cent. equivalent to 116.2 cubic inches of gas per oz. of Powder.
"Royal Baking Powder."
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Carbonate of Ammonia
Tartaric Acid

Available carbonic acid gas 12.40 per cent. equivalent to 116.2 cubic inches of gas per oz. of Powder.
Ammonia gas 6.43 per cent. equivalent to 10.4 cubic inches per oz. of Powder.
Note.—The Tartaric Acid was doubtless introduced as free acid, but subsequently combined with ammonia, and exists in the Powder as a Tartrate of Ammonium.

E. G. LOVE, Ph. D., New York, Jan'y 17th, 1881.
The above shows conclusively that "Cleveland's Superior" is a strictly pure Cream of Tartar Baking Powder. It has also been analyzed by Professor Johnson of Yale College; Dr. Green of the University of Pennsylvania; President Morton of the Stevens Institute; Wm. M. Habbshaw, F. O. S., Analyst for the Chemical Trade of New York, and other eminent chemists, all of whom pronounce it absolutely pure and healthful.—Hall's Journal of Health, for April, 1882.

Bradley's Phosphate is cheaper for farmers to buy than any other phosphate, as it costs very much less in proportion to the amount of plant food it contains, being a highly concentrated phosphate. It is also the best of all phosphates, producing larger crops of far better quality, and is a complete fertilizer for all crops.

On this subject we publish the following letters:
HARMONY, R. I., Nov. 14, 1882.
This season I used Bradley's Phosphate on corn, and the results were most successful. In sowing corn I proved the value of the Phosphate as compared with stable manure. I used 500 pounds of the Phosphate per acre without other manure, by the aid of a horse on which I used twelve large loads of good manure. The Phosphate gave better returns. It was a complete fertilizer for all crops, and all they are represented as being.

"RAIL STONES AS BIG AS PUMPKINS."

There is some doubt about the rail-stones having been taken in large quantities, as some people said they were large as pumpkins. It must have been a very severe storm. NEW YORK, April 25.—The trial of the action of the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railway Company against James McHenry, for the recovery of $1,807,080 17 was begun to-day before Judge Coxe, in the United States Circuit Court. The complaint alleges that at various times during the years 1873, 1874 and 1875, at London, England, McHenry, as agent of the Erie Railway Company, sold certain securities for cash on account of the company, proceeds of which he has never accounted for. This case was tried some years ago in the English High Court and defendant was ordered to pay plaintiff $208,980. No part of this sum has ever been paid, hence the present suit.

Senator Edmunds.

Says the Brooklyn Eagle: The cordiality with which Senator Edmunds has been received at the South is a striking proof not only of the abatement of the rancors born of the civil war, but of the esteem which high personal qualities universally command. Senator Edmunds is a sturdy partisan, an unflinching and determined antagonist, but he is an adversary who never dishonors his cause by the low acts and petty subterfuges of partisanship. His utterances are usually the utterances of a man of cool judgment and profound reflection, and there is a dignity about him that challenges respect even when his opinions provoke the most emphatic dissent. He is an encouraging example of what purity of character and intellectual sincerity can do to lift a statesman above the animosities that beset a political career.

If there are 150,000 oath-bound Fenian conspirators in the United Kingdom, it must be said they are pretty poor conspirators, to judge from what they accomplish.

Ink! Ink!

The largest assortment of Ink to be found in the city is at Clarke's.

I HAVE the leading brands of Ink of the following manufacturers:

Farm, Garden and Household.

Budding and Grafting.

An address read by A. F. Barron before the North of Scotland Horticultural Society, is published in the London Garden, occupying several columns. It contains a statement of many interesting facts, but some of its statements, not being of universal application, may be modified. One of these is that "in strong calcareous soils dwarf stocks for fruit trees do not succeed." In this country we have never had better success with dwarfs than on strong calcareous soils, good cultivation being given. Another is that "peaches worked on the plum are far more hardy and vigorous." We find otherwise. They grow slower on the plum, and so far as this retarded growth exists, with its earlier ripening of wood, the trees are slightly hardier, precisely the same as when the growth is reduced on poor soils or on uncultivated ground. Again, "a pear may be grafted on the apple, but does not live beyond a year or so." Some pears will live several years; we have seen the old Summer Bonchretien some twelve years or more grafted on a Spitzenburgh apple, bearing well, and some other sorts several years. The same writer further states that a gardener grafted a certain pear on a common Hawthorn, and "the fruit was very similar to haws." Obviously, he mistook a shoot closely below the point of union for one above it; or else inserted by mistake one of the shoots he has just trimmed from the Hawthorn. We have known both these mistakes committed by men usually careful. —(Country Gentleman.)

Grafting the Grape Vine.—A New Method.

We desire to have new varieties of grapes come quickly into bearing, but vines from nurseries are frequently tardy. Even after careful nursing they will often droop and die, while a few buds out off on arrival and properly grafted may produce fruit in a short time. Grafting on cut-off underground gnarly stumps of vines, as usually practised is very uncertain at best. Our method is to take a good strong branch or cane of vine, or even a whole young vine when a change of fruit is desired, and whip the graft in the usual way. We then cover up the vine in the soil as near the roots as possible, leaving above ground only a bud or two of the graft. It is well known how quickly a layer will make a hearing vine, as it has the advantage of the parent roots as well as the roots it produces. The layer may be extended, if long enough, to grow where the vine is to remain. Vineyards may in this way be quickly changed to better varieties.

Agricultural Hints.

Put setting hens in quiet, dark places, away from disturbance. Broom corn is likely to become the staple crop of Western Nebraska.

I have seen sheep that were a long time getting over being washed, and some never did. I would like to see no washing the rule, and then have wool sold on its true merits.

For most vegetables you cannot use too much manure. If farmers were to see me apply manure for early cabbage, they would be surprised, says an Ohio farmer. The more rotten it is the better.

A New York farmer declares that an acre of the Hubbard squash will fatten more hogs than the corn that can be raised on the same ground. He has gathered from six to eight tons from an acre.

The growing of cauliflower is receiving more attention than formerly, particularly so the earlier varieties. The crops of Dwarf Erfurt and Snowball begin to come forward in June; and these, with the latter sorts, are in the market, almost without intermission, until November.

Remember when setting out plants of any description to spread the roots out in their natural position, not cover them when cramped or doubled up. Be careful not to cover the crowns of strawberry plants with earth; set them just level with the surface, and press the earth firmly about them.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman says his experience has been that comparatively few cows will bear feeding for the highest production of milk for more than two or three years, without getting out of condition, either by garget, barrenness, or abortion; or when inclined to fatten, the secretions after a few months from calving are appropriate to the making of flesh rather than milk.

A good sign of the times is that so many young men in starting to farm adopt improved stock, and they become enthusiastic, earnest and ambitious, which alone will bring success, and all the more certain on the high tide of improved stock breeding. Stock of some kind is essential to successful farming, and improved stock brings the best profit, quickest returns, and gives a charm of prosperity and dignity to the farm.

From all over the country comes the warning to farmers to look well to their seed corn and test it thoroughly before planting. Select 100 kernels at random, and either plant in a box of earth by the kitchen stove or put between wet cloths at the ordinary temperature of the same room, or sprout in a lot of water hung in the sunshine. The germinated kernels will indicate the precise age that will grow.

There should be ample provision of food or farm animals throughout the summer months, when the pastures are short from drought. A lentil sort of oats may be sown with peas and thus obtain a double crop of green fodder. The value of Hungarian grass as a supply for good green food, is not easily over-estimated.

The potato beetle is well under control, and potatoes are now a certain crop, and a profitable one when given clean culture on a rich mellow soil. It is well to plant early sorts and harvest the tubers before the rot has time to reach them.

Put all farm implements in good order during rainy days. Clear up the rut-ways that have accumulated. Look well to fences before the cattle are turned out.

The care bestowed on sheep by some farmers during the winter, invites weakness, and a troublesome irritation of the skin and loss of wool often follows poor treatment. Raising lambs for the spring market is a profitable business, but great care of both ewes and lambs is necessary. The strength and vitality of the lamb after birth depend largely on the condition of the ewe previous to parturition. Much injury is done to the unborn lambs by compelling the ewes to go without water. Licking the snow to quench thirst chills the fetus and weakens the lamb, even if more serious results do not follow.

Household Hints.

HARD SOAP.—Four gallons of water, six pounds of washing soda, six pounds of clean fat, three and one-half pounds of stone lime. Put the lime and soda in the water and boil until the soda is dissolved; then pour it into a tub and let it settle; then pour off the water gently, with as little lime as possible; then add the fat and boil it until done. Take a little out in a saucer, and if no water remains under when cold it is done. Pour it in deep pans or a tub, and when cold cut it in bars.

CLEANING BEDSPREADS.—Cut a pound of bar soap into thin slices, and add to it an ounce of pearl ash and a quarter of an ounce of sal soda. Pour a pailful of boiling water upon it and stir it up until well dissolved. Put some warm water into a tub, and add a quart of the soap solution. Put in the heavy bedspread, beat it well, turn it over often, and squeeze out the dirt until the water is quite soiled. Then change it, putting in another quart of the solution, and proceed as before. Rinse in two waters, barely warm to the hand. If possible, pass it through a wringer; then dry it on the clothes line.

TO CLEAN A SILK DRESS.—Take six tablespoonfuls of the best soft soap, or four tablespoonfuls of yellow bar soap scraped into thin shavings with a sharp knife, and dissolve in it just enough boiling water to melt it, four tablespoonfuls of honey, half a pint of alcohol and half a pint of hot water. Beat all to a froth and spread the breadths of the dress, one at a time, upon a sheet, and with a sponge dipped into the mixture rub it over the silk, taking care to mark the soiled places before it is all wetted, so they can have an extra rubbing. Dip each breadth into cold water as soon as it is cleansed, squeezing it up and down in the water, so as to take out all the soap, but do not wring it out or wring it in the hands. Shake and snap the silk to clear it from the water, and hang it out of doors till it is partly dry, then roll it into a towel or sheet. Proceed in this way till all the parts of the dress are cleansed and partly dried, and iron them on the wrong side of the silk, or over a newspaper, till perfectly dry.

If stung or bitten by an insect, snake or animal, apply spirits of hartshorn very freely with a soft rag, because it is one of the strongest alkalies, and is familiar to most persons. The substance which causes the so-called poison from bites or stings is, as far as is ascertained, generally acid. Hence the hartshorn antagonizes it in proportion to the promptitude with which it is applied. If no hartshorn is at hand, pour a cup of hot water on a cup of cooking soda or saleratus, or even the ashes of wood just from the stove or fireplace, because all these are strong alkalies, and hartshorn is only best because it is the strongest.

Extreme Tired Feeling.—A lady tells us "the first bottle has done me a great deal of good. Her fond does not distress her now, nor does the water that she takes before she goes to bed. She has been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No further preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A prominent physician, in speaking of that very common complaint, headache, says that as a rule a dull, heavy, headache, situated over the brows and accompanied by languor, chilliness and a feeling of general discomfort, with distaste for food which sometimes approaches nausea, can be completely removed, in a cut ten minutes, by a two-grain dose of iodine of p tassaia dissolved in half a wineglassful of water; this being sipped so that the whole quantity may be consumed in about ten minutes.

Kitchen Hints.

Tie a piece of cloth on the end of a stick, wet it with vinegar, and clean the hinges of stove doors, even while the stove is hot.

Five minutes' soaking in water and ammonia will clean the dirtiest frying pan so that it will only need rinsing and wiping to be ready for use.

Never grease hoots or shoes when they are dry. First dampen them, then apply a good dressing of cold unsalted beef tallow; rub in thoroughly with the hand, keeping away from the fire.

If the inside of your tea-pot or coffee-pot is black from long use, fill it with hard soap, set on the stove and let it boil for half an hour to an hour. It will clean it as bright as a new dollar and cost no work.

Fashion Notes.

Double apron fronts for dresses are revived.

Bright plaids will be much worn by children.

Plain silk suits will be more worn than lace ones.

All colors are fashionable, but red is most in favor.

Plaid skirts with plain corsages will be much worn.

Azaleas are the house plants of the passing moment.

Jersey waists are more popular for children than ever.

The Jersey is destined to great popularity this season.

The shade of blue known as Ophelia is revived in veilings.

Postilion backs are the most frequent finish for pointed corsages.

Navy blue remains the favorite color for yachting and mountain suits.

The empire puff worn at the bottom of the skirt has been revived in Paris.

Buckles, large and small, are the popular military ornaments this season.

Box pleatings and flat puffs appear around the bottom of many pointed bodices.

The latest importations of Paris dresses have larger tournures and hip draperies.

The favorite style of evening corsage is high behind, but low, oval, or square in front.

All the late importations of Paris dresses made by K. J. Dunning & Co. have short skirts.

Terra cotta, dark blue, and dark red are frequent combinations in suits and in millinery this spring.

The favorite bouquet is composed of French violets, lilies of the valley, and Jacqueminot roses.

Pretty capotes with straw crowns and trims composed of pleatings of lace will be much worn as the season advances.

New flannel suits for children are made of cheviot dannels, garnet, blue, dark green, and gray, being the favorite colors.

The summer silks which come in large plaids of brilliant blues and reds sell more readily than any other for dress skirts.

Large plaids are used for dress skirts to be worn with velvet, velveteen, Jersey webbing, and plain veiling, and plain silk bodices.

New wraps are in every conceivable shape, from paradieses to mantles, dolmans, jackets, jerseys, radiogotes, and visites, havelocks, and raglans.

Ottoman silks have the run of popular favor, but velvets, gros grains, and satins of all grades, from duches to merroleux, are used in dress making.

Two aprons, one long and square, the other short and much wrinkled and looped around the hips, appear on the latest importations of French dresses.

Sheer mull muslins, dotted, sprigged, or figured in Greek squares, stars and other designs, are being made up in large quantities for young girls' graduating and commencement dresses.

Tinted muslins veillings in shades of pale terra cotta, crushed strawberry, raspberry, corn, blue, and ashes of roses, will take the place, in a measure, of the cream and white wools so popular for evening dresses last summer.

A Miss Buchanan, once calling a brave soldier on his courage, said: "I can walk on the cannon's mouth better than you can." "Yes," was the prompt reply, "or a man's courage is like a cannon's mouth, it is only when it is fired that it is proved." It may be safely assumed that the lady, to whom the gallant Captain has paid his respects, had the enthrall. This quality is a noble one as it is useful.

Mr. Nathan Peckley, with E. F. Montz, Mercantile, Wilkesbarre, Pa., says: "I have had catarrh for 15 years. Ely's Cream Balm has opened my nostrils and reduced the inflammation of my eyes. I can now stand strong light." This Balm is, indeed, a marvel of fragrance, illness, and curative powers.

For Dyspepsia, Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Indigestion, Impurity of the Blood, Pimples, Acne, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.—It is the most common of all diseases, and is the cause of many other ailments. It is characterized by a general feeling of languor, a dull, heavy, headache, situated over the brows and accompanied by chilliness and a feeling of general discomfort, with distaste for food which sometimes approaches nausea, can be completely removed, in a cut ten minutes, by a two-grain dose of iodine of p tassaia dissolved in half a wineglassful of water; this being sipped so that the whole quantity may be consumed in about ten minutes.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Travelling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Indigestion, Acne, Pimples, Eruptions of the Skin, &c. It will invigorate the system, and give a healthy complexion.

If you have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be refreshed.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator.

In the House.

For whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe, purgative, and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless, and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE.

And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.

Simmons' Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.

J. GILL SHURTLE, Governor of Ala.

Thos. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., has used it for some time, and is satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.

Simmons' Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only thing that never fails to relieve me," says one of our medical friends, "is a dose of Simmons' Liver Regulator. It is a safe, reliable, and effective remedy, and I have found nothing to benefit me to the extent of this medicine. It is a safe, reliable, and effective remedy, and I have found nothing to benefit me to the extent of this medicine."

Dr. T. W. Mason says: "From actual experience in the use of Simmons' Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a powerful and safe medicine."

That Tired Feeling.

THE Tired Feeling is an oppressive and burdensome to the human mind as that tired feeling of which invalids complain on the approach of nervous disorder. The depression and despondency of spirit attending this state are insupportable. The lassitude, languor and debility peculiar to this condition are wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies, stimulates and quickens the blood, invigorates the nervous system, and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body.

A lady tells us "The first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good; her food does not distress her now, nor does the suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she had before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured my son of pimples on his face.—ALEX. ANKRESON, Lowell, Mass.

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best medicines we ever sold for purifying the blood and for spring debility, and do not hesitate to give it our unqualified recommendation."—Geo. C. Goodwin & Co., Wholesale Druggists, Boston.

When the blood is foul and thick in the spring, disorders of various kinds manifest themselves, such as a feeling of general debility, a sense of weakness, a want of appetite, a languid and apathetic, sometimes a nervous and excited condition. This condition, morbid and enervating, is wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes and enriches the blood, invigorates the nervous system, tones and strengthens the digestive organs, and imparts new life and energy to all the organs. Try it.

"I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla one of the best medicines for spring, when the blood is in a low condition, and needs cleansing. I have been benefited by it. W. H. Curtis, R. I. Agent, Haverhill, Mass.

A prominent business man remarks: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything. I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window of an Apothecary, and I got a bottle. After taking it a week, she had a rousing appetite. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

SUPERIOR ON PAR TRIAL.

I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as the most reliable and best spring medicine. I had tried many others without good results, and consequently condemned all alike, until I gave Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial, when I was convinced it was superior to all others. Every spring I take three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and know nothing of that terrible languor so prevalent at that season of the year. I have just finished my first bottle for 1883, and already feel much improved. Mrs. J. M. Carter, Boston.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by druggists—$1.00; six bottles for $5.00. Prepared only by O. J. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

"It is impossible to show qualities on paper, neither can values be represented in words."

NEWPORT COUNTY NEWS.

MIDDLETOWN.

Mr. Alanson Peckham of Easton, took an eighteen-pound bass from Easton's pond the other day, notwithstanding the oft expressed opinion that there were no bass in the pond.

COMMITTEE MEETING.—The Public School Committee met for organization at the town hall on Saturday, April 21st, 1883. All the members being present the following organization was effected: Benjamin Wyatt was chosen chairman and Joel Peckham, clerk, and Philip A. Brown was elected superintendent; also appointed committee on qualifications. Charles H. Hazard was appointed committee to collect the rent of school lot when due and pay the same to the proper officers.

Voted, that each resident committee man be appointed a sub-committee to visit, and to have a general supervision over the school in the district in which he resides. The clerk was authorized to call all special meetings of the committee for the ensuing year.

The school terms for the year were arranged as follows: Spring term from May 1st to July 29—9 weeks. Fall term from Sept. 1st to Nov. 10th—11 weeks. Winter term to commence on Dec. 3d, and close at the option of the trustees. Any teacher teaching school during vacation cannot receive any compensation from the public school money unless to make up time lost by sickness or some other unavoidable cause.

It was voted that the regular meeting of the committee be held on the third Saturdays of April, July, Oct. and January.

LITTLE COMPTON.

Canker rash and diphtheria are quite prevalent among the children here.

The Rev. Mr. Sturtevant, M. D., of this place, has been confined to his house for the last two weeks in consequence of illness, but he is now reported convalescent.

The Rev. Mr. Hart, pastor of the Congregational church, has been afflicted with the diphtheria, as also have his children very seriously, but all are in a fair way of recovery.

The Rev. Mr. Goodier, the Methodist clergyman, has located at the parsonage in this village. He has occupied the pulpit two Sabbaths, attended the funeral of Abner Case, and since he received his new appointment he has taken to himself a helpmeet. He is very much liked by the people.

Mr. Abner Case, who died recently at the advanced age of 94 years, was the oldest inhabitant of the town, and was a hard working, industrious farmer. He followed the marketing business between here and New Bedford as long as he was able, and by judicious frugality he accumulated a handsome property.

BLOCK ISLAND.

Hon. Nicholas Ball and wife arrived home from Boston on Sunday morning.

The steamer Geo. W. Danielson arrived on Sunday morning with a number of passengers and considerable freight.

The cargo of coal is being taken from the stranded steamer Professor Morse. Steamers Hunter and Confidence are at work on her, and the Boston Towboat Co. is to take the steamer to Providence.

TIVERTON.

Benjamin S. Wilkie of Tiverton, R. I., has sold to William N. Mosher three acres land on the West side of the road leading from Adamsville to Westport.

A well-known gentleman of Tiverton, whose highest ambition for some time has been to get married, being on a visit to Portsmouth, was informed that if he would go to a particular house on Friday evening he would be met by a lady that was willing to be his wife. He accordingly went and found the aforesaid lady (who, by the way, was a young man in disguise) and also a person who represented himself to be a clergyman, who soon pronounced them man and wife. The happy groom at once commenced a search for lodgings for himself and wife and while thus engaged his bride gave him the slip and it is doubtful if he would know her if he should see her.

PORTSMOUTH.

NOTES.—On Tuesday morning 24th inst., one could not help thinking that winter had returned, as the ground was covered with snow 2 inches deep.

Mr. John T. Brown, cut and took to Newport on Wednesday, the first island asparagus of the season.

Mr. Charles C. Stocum, lost a nice young mare a few days since. One that bid fair to have been a valuable animal.

The funeral services of Amy T. the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy P. Durfee, were held at the Christian church, on Wednesday afternoon, the Rev. William Miller formerly pastor of said church, and Friends Mary Alice Gifford and Levi Atmy each had words of comfort for the afflicted family.

A company of young friends of Miss Annie E. Sherman, came out from Newport on Thursday evening, and had a private fancy dress party at her home, bringing all the requisites for the occasion, and a very pleasant evening was the result. The music was by Mr. Thos. Shields, of the Newport orchestra, Mr. Chas. Gilien, prompter.

Rev. Lewis L. Briggs of Providence, will preach at the Christian church tomorrow.

Miss Ruthie Hall's pony ran away Thursday evening demolishing the buggy; fortunately Miss Hall was out of the buggy and thus escaped injury.

NEW ENGLAND ITEMS.

RHODE ISLAND.

The Continental Steamboat Company shored better facilities to their patrons on and after Thursday, April 25, by having a morning boat leaving Providence at 8:30, and leave Newport at 4:30 P. M.

An exchange has an article on "How to run a newspaper." The article should only be read by editors, as everybody else under heaven knows just how a newspaper ought to be run.

Hays the Boston Transcript Sprague and Butler are often coupled together of late, but there is such a thing as doing injustice even to Hattie.

The statement of the counsel of Katherine Chase, formerly Mrs. Sprague, exposes depths of baseness, peridy, and detestably cruelty, in comparison with which the worst possible public and political career appears decent and forgivable when attended by a staid and devoted home life.

Further developments relative to the alleged persecution of Dr. Bowen of Hattiet, R. I., came to light in the arrest of Daniel E. Hall on Thursday night. Hall has been engaged since March as Bowen's detective. He associated with suspected persons, and claims he and two others were hired by one Cutting to burn Bowen's barn, and paid $150. After the money was divided the other man backed out of the bargain, and Hall was arrested as he was about reporting to his employer that the plan was a failure. Cutting makes a general denial.

Two colored gentlemen who were travelling from East Providence to Bristol, Sunday, in a buggy, to attend a funeral, were upset on South Main street, in Warren, and one of them considerably shaken up by being dragged a short distance by the wheel of the vehicle. Oliver G. L. Brown, who was near the scene of the accident, righted the vehicle and started the travellers on their way.

Bristol voted on the license question last week, and 772 votes were cast—the largest number ever polled on a local issue. Of them 346 were for license and 426 were against it; or, no license had a majority of 80.

Rev. Hugh Carmody, D. D., pastor of St. Mary's Church, New Britain, Conn., died Tuesday, of pneumonia. He was a native of Inness, county Clare, Ireland, and was educated at Rome. His pastorates have been at Thompsonville, New Haven and New Britain, Conn., and Providence, R. I. He was one of the oldest priests in New England and a very scholarly man.

The passenger cars in use between Wickford and Wickford Junction have been freshly painted and otherwise prepared for the coming summer's travel.

The voters are again to vote on a city charter for Pawtucket on the first of October next.

Emil Bentz, a German jeweler, died suddenly on the Cove promenade, Providence, of hemorrhage of the lungs.

A son of Isaac Whipple, aged 10 years, died in Central Falls Sunday from the result of a fall four days before.

The contractor has commenced work upon the new fire-proof vault ordered by the General Assembly to be built in the Kent County court-house.

There is nothing new from the Rock and "Conspiracy." Gov. Littlefield and Attorney General Colt met Wednesday afternoon to consider what action should be taken. It is understood that Dr. Bowen and his friends have decided to say nothing further in a public way, until the matter is properly brought before the court, considering that they have already said as much as is prudent and consistent with the furtherance of justice.

Gen. Nelson Viall has accepted the position of general superintendent of the State fair, tendered him by the executive committee. The appointment is regarded as a very excellent one, and the friends of the society feel greatly pleased with his acceptance of the office.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Mrs. Mary Ann Brayton, a Fall River lady who has long been prominent in good works, died in that city on Saturday. She was formerly Director of the Orphan Asylum and latterly a Director in the Children's Home, an active member of the First Congregational Church. She was a sister of Mrs. Jesse Eddy and of the late Daniel Paine of Providence, and mother of Hon. Elbert C. Brayton, a lawyer of Columbia, S. C., and the late Thomas L. Brayton, who was killed by the moonshiners two years ago while endeavoring to enforce the United States laws against illicit whisky manufacturers.

The Fall River Electric Light Company have suspended lighting operations for the present, until a full inspection of the system in all respects has been made by the insurance companies that have risks on property lighted, and a decision is expected in a few days. The lights are to be covered with wire gauze, and that causes a little delay also.

By a vote of 55 yeas to 100 yeas the Massachusetts House Tuesday refused to engross the resolve for amendments to the constitution so that women may be appointed justices of the peace and notaries public, a two-thirds vote being necessary.

CONNECTICUT.

Three thousand depositors in Connecticut savings banks have not made enquiries about their money for twenty years past. The larger part of them will never be heard of.

Mrs. Fanny Knapp drowned herself in a pond, near her residence at Ball's pond, Conn., while insane. Her family were all suicides.

MAINE.

The plan of the new hotel at Kinen, Moosehead Lake, Me., has been completed. The estimated cost of the new building is $80,000.

Nearly all the Penobscot (Me.) saw mills will be running next week. About 40,000,000 feet of logs are on hand, and these will suffice until the drives get in.

The Portland (Me.) papers announce the sale of Cushing's Island to a corporation of which Governor Foster of Ohio is a member, and Frederick Law Olmsted is landscape gardener. Seaside houses are to be erected, etc.

Two bears belonging to Frank I. Payne's combination got loose in the Portland (Me.) Theatre Friday, and held possession of the building for some hours. They were only captured at last by being beaten into submission.

Died.

In this city, 23d inst., Capt. Joshua Stacy, in the 57th year of his age.

There is a sacred spot on earth, Bright scenes my heart holds dear, Where dreams of hope that from my birth In visions hover o'er me here.

Where are those scenes to run no more? Where is the love my soul hath craved? The voices that to my heart are near, They linger at my father's grave.

When twilight on the sacred hills, With gleams of glory lights the scene, With hushed and hallowed memory fills Of happy days long have been.

They are not from earth forever gone, Thy spirit's fled from worldly cares; Our mourning hearts are left alone, To mingle grief with burning tears.
